Bitcoin is a newcomer to the world of exchange-traded funds (ETFs). Bitcoin ETFs allow investors to get exposure to the enticing potential of BTC without having to directly own it or safely store it.

Currently, Bitcoin ETFs can only hold Bitcoin futures contracts or stocks of companies and other ETFs with exposure to cryptocurrency. The Security and Exchange Commission (SEC) continues to evaluate whether it will ultimately approve ETFs that own Bitcoin directly.

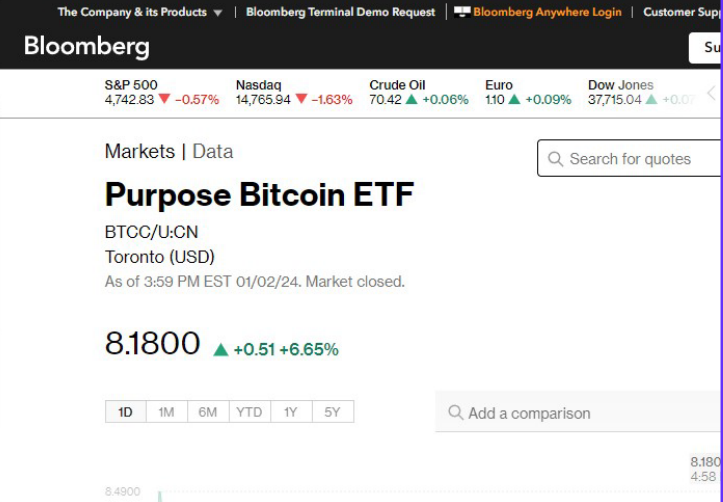

To help you understand this new corner of the ETF universe, Forbes Advisor has reviewed the Bitcoin ETFs currently available for trading in the United States and filtered them by total assets under management (AUM).

Staking ETF BTC UP TO 300% OF THE AMOUNT INVESTED in 12 months

We chose an exchange specialized in staking, StakeX. Which created the Bitcoin Token ETF modality. SAVVE is the bridge that connects you with this new economy. Because Stake X converts your cryptocurrencies into Bitcoin custody and appreciates with Bitcoin Halving and currency volatility. This is how we created the largest bitcoin block in the world, by connecting thousands of people who hold bitcoin.

Benefits of Staking

- Community growing with this solution, the token enters a hypercurve of appreciation, the perspective is that the token will reach around US$0.30 in 2024 and that in 2026 it will exceed US$5;
- When you hold your tokens for 12 months you make money as the scarcity of the ETF Bitcoin increases which increases sales and the value of the token also increases.
